2013 ANNUAL REPORT

“That is the gift and the promise that LVC offers the world – a year of service, a lifetime of commitment.”

THE EVOLUTION OF SERVICE

Dear friends,

History will show what an amazing era of change we are experiencing now. In the last six years we have elected our first black President, secured rights and growing acceptance for the GLBT community, extended health care to millions of people who until recently were uninsured, and experienced the growing electoral strength of people of color.

These changes seemed out of reach to me when I was getting my start in the social justice movement years ago. For example, in the attempt to officially allow our gay and lesbian brothers and sisters to serve openly in the military in 1994, we got “Don’t Ask, Don’t Tell”, an official “you’d better stay in the closet” proclamation! And health care reform didn’t get even that far.

Yet, the changes that we are experiencing today did not happen spontaneously. It took the perseverance and faith of many people working in the trenches during those three decades to achieve goals that often seemed beyond our reach.

And that is the gift and the promise that LVC offers the world – a year of service, a lifetime of commitment.

LVC gives people the opportunity to serve the cause of peace with justice in an environment that promotes the faithful practice of living simply and sustainably in intentional community. We believe that these are the tools to enable people to sustain their service, especially in difficult times.

Faithful service is the engine that drives the changes we are experiencing today! Since 1979, over 2,500 people committed to the LVC experience and a recent alumni survey found that 92% have continued their quest for peace with justice in their lives. This translates into over four million hours of service during LVC years and millions more each year by LVC alumni.

I am pleased to present the 2013 Annual Report to you – “The Evolution of Service.” I know that the stories herein mirror those of so many of you in the LVC community. Thank you so much for your support and commitment.

In Service,

Sam Collins

it starts with EXPLORATION

AS A FRESHMAN AT MESSIAH COLLEGE in Grantham, PA, Kristal Smith's plan was to graduate and attend medical school to be an OBGYN. Then, through her coursework in Human Development, she realized her real passion is working with and supporting youth and individuals during difficult times. This interest, coupled with a strong faith, led her to Lutheran Volunteer Corps.

As an Intern Social Worker at Samaritan Ministry of Greater Washington, an organization that supports homeless and other individuals in need, Kristal works with clients one-on-one and in workshop settings to set goals and plan for their next steps. The best part of her job is getting to see individuals succeed.

After only six months in LVC and getting to meet Vice President Joe Biden while serving meals on MLK Day, Kristal committed to another year in hopes of defining herself as someone committed to service and social-justice.

"I'm still learning my role as an individual within community and how I am capable of putting a smile on somebody else's face," she said. "I used to think I couldn't change the world and that I needed more than just me. But as part of a community, we can work together... to change somebody's world."

Kristal's continued discernment process and commitment to exploring where her passions meet the greatest needs of her community, is exactly what we hope for LVC Volunteers during their year of service.

What she does know for sure, is that she wants everyone to feel loved and important. Her dream, after attending graduate school, is to open a safe space for youth that houses a clinic and community space for recreation and education. "I'm not sure what my future will be like," she said. "whatever it is, it's going to be something big."

ELIZABETH LIENESCH CHOSE LVC after graduating from Carleton College in 2008 because she was hungry to make change in the world. Interest in community organizing led her to her LVC placement at TakeAction MN where she worked for two years of service as a Health Care Organizer. After LVC, she accepted a full-time position with TakeAction MN and recently became their Organizing Field Manager.

Elizabeth believes that both LVC and TakeAction MN are unique organizations that work in different ways toward social justice. “The lessons we learned as housemates in LVC were important for my work. We had to learn to communicate and be open about our wants and needs; that sort of lesson translates well into creating space for meetings and workplaces.”

Through her LVC experience and work at TakeAction MN, Elizabeth has become a strong leader who, in turn, is organizing communities to make change. “People are looking for ways to make change in their communities,” she said. “My role and my organization’s role are to connect people with each other around the change they want to see take place.”

Since 2008, Elizabeth has been making those connections. On any given day she oversees field organizers, makes phone calls, engages with community members across the state to hear their stories, and supports other staff. While she is proud of the policy victories that TakeAction MN has made during her tenure, she is also happy to be working in a place where she can live out her vocation.

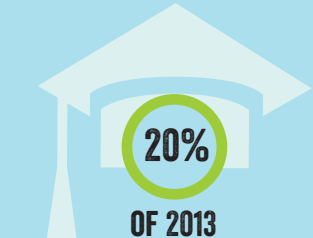

“I feel most spiritually fulfilled when I am engaged with people around things they care about,” she said. Elizabeth participates in building the Kingdom of God on earth in her communities by being in relationship with people, and working to change the structures that divide in order to bring about reconciliation and wholeness.

“ I ... stay committed to LVC’s core

are the prism

it comes full circle with
LIFE’S WORK

JOANNE OTTE UNDERSTANDS HER WORK WITH LVC over the past twelve years as not only a job, but a calling. Her introduction to LVC was similar to many alumni – she was drawn to LVC after college where she majored in religion and social work. As she continued her discernment she was called to be a diaconal minister – a call to word and service and the intersection of church and world. Little did she know that this would bring her back to LVC as a staff member serving at various times as a City Coordinator, National Program Director and Admissions and Alumni Relations Director. Through these roles she supported Volunteers and non-profit organizations on a collective journey of faith and justice.

“My work with LVC has been part of my commitment to service and justice,” she said. “In addition to LVC, I am involved with my local congregation and have tried to think about and stay committed to LVC’s core principles—they are the prism through which I see the world.”

After contributing to and being shaped by LVC in so many ways, she has joined the staff of Wheat Ridge Ministries in Chicago as Director of Programs. Wheat Ridge’s mission is to feed ministries of healing and hope in the name of the healing Christ. Wheat Ridge has provided grant funding to LVC in past years for special projects. In her new role, Joanne will continue to offer support to Lutheran-based organizations as they create projects within Wheat Ridge’s mission. She sees her new role as another opportunity for church and community to come together. “I feel privileged and blessed to find a call where my faith is active in the world.”
